Comprehension Questions

Answer the following in complete sentences.

1. Describe Robinson Crusoe's ancestry and education.
Crusoe's father is from Bremen, married Crusoe's mother, whose relations were named Robinson, a good family. Crusoe has two older brothers. Crusoe's father gave him his education, preparing him for the study of law.
2. Give two examples of ominous foreshadowing in the early part of this chapter.
The examples of ominous foreshadowing are when the author states, "What became of my second brother I never knew any more than my father or mother did know what was become of me," and "there seemed to be something fatal in that propension of nature tending directly to the life of misery which was to befall me."
3. According to Crusoe's father, adventures are for what type of men? Why?
Crusoe's father says adventures are for men of desperate fortunes, or men aspiring to attain superior fortunes. He says these men are below or above Crusoe, and that he is in the middle state, the most suited to human happiness.
4. What has happened to Crusoe's older brother? How is this a lesson to young Crusoe?
Crusoe's older brother was persuaded by his young desires, and joined the army, where he was killed. This is a lesson to Crusoe because he can see how affected his father is by his brother's death, which makes him not want the same to happen to him.
5. Describe the choice before young Crusoe: the life his father wants him to enjoy and the life he wants. Which life appeals to you?
Crusoe's father wants him to live what he considers the best life—a life in between rich and poor. His father can make him financially comfortable and set him up to be successful and happy in life if he will only stay home. Crusoe has an adventurous spirit; he wants to roam the world in search of his own fortune.
6. Summarize Crusoe's father's arguments for choosing the "middle station" in life.
Crusoe's father argues that the "middle station" is the best place to be in life. The people of the "middle station" have fewer problems than the rich, who live too luxuriously and extravagantly, and the poor, who have to work too hard and suffer continual want.
